Are you interested in demonstrating your expertise, building relationships, and pioneering a platform? The AAMC Collaborative for Health Equity: Act, Research, Generate Evidence (CHARGE) is looking for five virtual community ambassadors to enrich our coworking health equity space for community members. These individuals will be responsible for co-facilitating discussions, events, and collaborations in the virtual community.

Who We Are

AAMC CHARGE cultivates the health equity community by advancing collaborative research, policy, and programmatic solutions to health and health care inequities.

The vision of AAMC CHARGE is an equitable and just society in which academic health centers and their multisector and community partners:

- Prioritize health equity research, action, and policy change.
- Partner with communities, families, patients, and sectors outside health care to address the many factors that contribute to a community's health.
- Advocate for structural changes that address the root causes of health inequities.

Why Us, Why Now?

The AAMC CHARGE virtual community, part of the AAMC Communities network, is committed to creating and amplifying opportunities for learning, engagement, and collaboration that help eliminate inequities in health and health care and that cultivate the next generation of health equity scientists. Ambassadors will:

- Receive a special Virtual Community badge in the network.
- Gain virtual management and engagement skills.
- Build relationships with colleagues and other health equity stakeholders.
- Be a part of growing a virtual community.
- Drive conversations about health equity and justice.
- Receive an award for a professional development opportunity or resource of choice that relates to the CHARGE mission.
